911 Call No. 1: Exes, Not Police, Are for Drunk-Dials

A 32-year-old Pasco County, Fla., man who called 911 to complain about his mother is facing criminal charges. Charles Dennison allegedly told a deputy that his mother took his beer and he wanted her arrested, and that he'd keep calling 911 until she was. Dennison was "very intoxicated" when the deputy arrived at the home. Dennison has been charged with making false 911 calls and was jailed on $150 bond. (AP)

911 Call No. 2: 'Help! This Guy Just [Thud]'

Police in Iowa City said a man who called them to report that he'd been punched was punched again by a second person while he was on the phone with 911. Police said the man told 911 dispatchers Tuesday that he had just been assaulted and was following the person who did it. Police said that while he was speaking with officers, a friend of the original assailant's punched the man and knocked him to the ground. (AP)

Oil Slick Drifts Toward Fla. Coast

BP's latest attempt to cap leak delayed after saw gets stuck

Pensacola, Fla.

The BP oil slick drifted perilously close to the Florida Panhandle's famous sugar-white beaches Wednesday as a risky gambit to contain the leak by shearing off the well pipe ran into trouble a mile under the sea when the diamond-tipped saw became stuck.

Crews freed the blade from the pipe and were hoping to finish the cut later in the day. The plan was to fit a cap on the blown-out well at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico to capture most of the spewing oil; the twisted, broken pipe had to be sliced first to allow a snug fit.

"I don't think the issue is whether or not we can make the second cut. It's about how fine we can make it, how smooth we can make it," said Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, the government's point man for the crisis.

New Rules Favor Fliers

Bumped passengers could be paid $1,300 if plan is approved

Washington

Airline passengers would receive as much as $1,300 for being bumped from a flight and would have 24 hours to cancel reservations without penalty, among other consumer protections proposed Wednesday by the Obama administration.

Currently, airlines must pay up to $800 for involuntary bumping of passengers.

The new rules would also require airlines to fully and prominently disclose baggage fees and refunds; and expense reimbursement when bags are not delivered on time, provide special notice any time baggage fees are increased, and notify passengers buying tickets whether they must pay to check up to two bags.

Price increases after a ticket is purchased would also be prohibited under the proposal.

Federal officials outlined new protections for airline passengers on Wednesday.

Currently, airlines may limit compensation to $400 for involuntary bumping of passengers if the carrier arranges substitute transportation scheduled to arrive at the passenger's destination one to two hours after the passenger's original scheduled arrival for domestic flights, or one to four hours for international flights.

They limit compensation to $800 if the substitute transportation is scheduled to arrive more than two hours later for domestic flights or more than four hours later for international flights.

The proposed rule would increase the limits to $650 and $1,300, respectively.

"This administration believes consumers are entitled to strong and effective protections when they fly," Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said.

LaHood estimated the Department of Transportation will finalize the new rules sometime this fall. JOAN LOWY (AP)

Woman: Former JonBenet Suspect Recruiting Kids

San Francisco

A woman who has a restraining order against the man who falsely claimed to have killed JonBenet Ramsey said Wednesday the former suspect is living as a woman and trying to form a cult of little girls to have sex with him.

The woman, 19-year-old Samantha Spiegel, told NBC's "Today" she had known John Mark Karr since she was 9, when he was a teacher at her school in San Francisco.

John Mark Karr falsely claimed to be the killer of JonBenet Ramsey in 2006.

Her attorney, Robin Sax, said Spiegel reached out to Karr after he confessed to the death of 6-year-old child beauty queen JonBenet, whose body was found in 1996 in her parents' home in Boulder, Colo.

Spiegel claimed in the restraining order request that Karr made "ongoing death threats" and "threats of sexual exploitation to children" in e-mails to her.

San Francisco police said they're investigating Karr and trying to locate him. (AP)

Blagojevich Steps Back Onstage

Former Ill. governor looks to beat the rap in corruption trial

Chicago

When Rod Blagojevich, a former Illinois governor, steps into a federal courtroom on Thursday, his madcap appearances on "Celebrity Apprentice" and the Second City comedy stage will be history. He will be playing to an audience of 13 — a dozen jurors and one no-nonsense judge — in the most pivotal performance of his life.

Blagojevich, who likes to say that he has never lost an election, will face three supremely experienced prosecutors. They will be marshaling dozens of secretly taped conversations and the testimony of some of Blagojevich's closest allies.

Former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich adamantly denies the charges against him.

"He'll have some explanation, but he's got a lot of explaining to do," said Jeffrey Cramer, until recently a supervisor in the U.S. attorney's office here. "I wouldn't want to be on that witness stand with the evidence the prosecution has."

Blagojevich, a lawyer who spent his career in politics, has vociferously proclaimed his innocence. He told The Washington Post in September, "Every allegation's a lie."

Within days of his startling December 2008 arrest, through his impeachment by the Illinois legislature and onward toward trial, Blagojevich has spoken with almost anyone who offered a microphone. He wrote a memoir proclaiming his innocence and did a singing and dancing Elvis impersonation at a private Chicago street party.

In a trial expected to last three to four months, prosecutors intend to show that Blagojevich schemed to trade state decisions for cash and campaign donations — and tried to peddle an appointment to President Obama's former Senate seat.

The trial is expected to expose details of Blagojevich's final months in office, which U.S. attorney Patrick Fitzgerald called "a public corruption crime spree" that "would make Lincoln roll over in his grave."

Iran Envoy Says IAEA Made Error

Vienna

A senior Iranian envoy accused the International Atomic Energy Agency on Wednesday of false reporting in saying that agency inspectors probing a laboratory for suspected undeclared nuclear experiments found some equipment removed.

Ali Ashgar Soltanieh declined a direct answer when asked whether he was blaming the agency for a mistake or whether he was suggesting another reason for the alleged false finding. But Soltanieh said his country would ask for a correction.

Soltanieh was referring to a finding published in an IAEA report on Iran's nuclear activities that touched on pyroprocessing, which purifies uranium metal used in warheads.

In January, Iran told the agency that it had carried out pyroprocessing experiments. IAEA experts last month revisited the site, only to establish "that the electrochemical cell had been removed" from the unit used in the experiments, according to the report.

While Iran often criticizes agency reporting on its activities, it rarely directly challenges its findings. (AP)

Netanyahu Defends Flotilla Raid

Israeli PM pledges to maintain blockade of Gaza despite outcry

Jerusalem

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on Wednesday rebuffed as "hypocrisy" international criticism of a deadly attack on a pro-Palestinian aid flotilla and defended Israel's blockade of the Gaza Strip, asserting that Iran would otherwise establish a "port" in Gaza for weapons shipments.

In a nationally televised speech, a defiant Netanyahu said Israel would maintain the blockade despite an outcry over the attack, in which Israeli marines commandeered the six-ship flotilla in international waters and killed nine people aboard the lead vessel. Netanyahu asserted that the Israelis fired in self-defense after boarding the Turkish cruise liner Mavi Marmara and meeting resistance from activists armed with clubs, knives and two pistols grabbed from the raiding party. Passengers disputed that account, saying the Israeli raiders started shooting first.

"Once again, Israel faces hypocrisy and a biased rush to judgment," Netanyahu told the nation Wednesday. "The international community cannot afford an Iranian port on the Mediterranean. ... The same countries that are criticizing us today should know that they could be targeted tomorrow."

He said Israel has a responsibility "to examine every ship going to Gaza, to stop the weapons and to let other cargo enter." If Israel had allowed the blockade to be breached, the flotilla "would have been followed by dozens, hundreds, of boats," Netanyahu said. "Each boat could carry dozens of missiles."

"Israel is told it has the right to defend itself, but when we do exercise that right, we're condemned for it," Netanyahu said.

He spoke after the Geneva-based U.N. Human Rights Council on Wednesday voted 32-3, with nine abstentions, to authorize "an independent international fact-finding mission to investigate violations of international law" in the incident in the Mediterranean Monday. The U.S., the Netherlands and Italy voted against the measure.

Israel, meanwhile, sent the remaining activists from the aid ships to Ben Gurion International Airport near Tel Aviv to be deported. Nearly 700 activists — including 400 Turks — were aboard the ships, which were carrying 10,000 tons of aid in an effort to break Israel's three-year-old blockade of Gaza.

Insurgents Attack National Peace Conference in Afghanistan

Kabul, Afghanistan

The thump of rockets and the rattle of gunfire punctuated President Hamid Karzai's speech opening a national conference Wednesday where delegates were divided over whether to negotiate peace with Taliban leaders to end nearly nine years of war.

Taliban fighters wearing suicide vests fired at the tent holding about 1,500 dignitaries, lawmakers and civil society activists, triggering a battle with security forces that killed at least two militants. Three civilians, but no delegates, were wounded.

One rocket landed with a thud about 100 yards from the tent and kicked up smoke. Karzai brushed off the interruption, about 10 minutes into his address, and urged insurgents to lay down their arms.

"My dear Taliban, you are welcome in your own soil," Karzai said, emphasizing that more fighting would only prevent the withdrawal of international forces from Afghanistan. (AP)

U.K. Taxi Driver Kills 12

Rampage in England shocks nation where mass assaults are rare

Seascale, England

A taxi driver drove his vehicle on a shooting spree across a tranquil stretch of northwest England on Wednesday, methodically killing 12 people and wounding 25 others before turning the gun on himself, officials said.

The rampage in the county of Cumbria was Britain's deadliest mass shooting since 1996, and it jolted a country where handguns are banned and multiple shootings are rare.

The body of the suspected gunman, 52-year-old Derrick Bird, was found in woods near Boot, a hamlet popular with hikers and vacationers in England's hilly, scenic Lake District. Police said two weapons were recovered from the scene.

Eight of the wounded were in the hospital, with three of them in critical condition. Queen Elizabeth II, who rarely issues statements responding to news, said she shared in "the grief and horror of the whole country" and passed on her sympathy to the families of the victims.

The shootings had "shocked the people of Cumbria and around the country to the core," Police Deputy Chief Constable Stuart Hyde said.

Police said it was too early to say what the killer's motive was, or whether the shootings had been random. Some reports said Bird had quarreled with fellow cabdrivers the night before the killings.

Peter Leder, a taxi driver who knew Bird, said he had seen the gunman Tuesday. He was struck by Bird's departing words.

"When he left he said, 'See you Peter, but I won't see you again,'" Leder told Channel 4 News.

The first shootings were reported in the town of Whitehaven, 350 miles northwest of London. Witnesses said the dead there included two of Bird's fellow cabbies. (AP)

Van der Sloot Sought in Slaying

Lima, Peru

A young Dutchman previously arrested in the 2005 disappearance of Alabama teen Natalee Holloway is the prime suspect in the week-end slaying of a Peruvian woman, police said Wednesday.

Joran van der Sloot is being sought in the Sunday killing of 21-year-old Stephany Flores in a Lima hotel, Criminal police chief Gen. Cesar Guardia said. He said the suspect fled the country the next day by land to Chile.

The Dutch government said Interpol has issued an international arrest warrant for Van der Sloot.

D.C. Teachers OK New Contract

Union approves pact by wide margin; deal to boost salaries $14K

Washington

District teachers ratified a new contract Wednesday that dramatically expands Chancellor Michelle A. Rhee's ability to remove poor educators, and places D.C. on a growing list of cities and states that have established classroom results, not seniority, as the standard by which teachers are judged.

Members of the Washington Teachers' Union approved the pact by a final tally of 1,412 votes to 425.

Michelle Rhee speaks with teachers at Benning Elementary School in Northeast.

The agreement now goes to the D.C. Council, where it is expected to gain swift approval.

The contract, the product of nearly 2 1/2 years of contentious negotiations that required intervention by a mediator, combines a rich traditional financial package with unorthodox initiatives historically resisted by unionized teachers. It includes a five-year, 21.6 percent increase in base pay that will boost the average annual salary of a D.C. educator from $67,000 to about $81,000, and gives the city's public school teachers salaries comparable to those in surrounding suburban districts, according to a union survey.

A new voluntary performance pay program to begin this fall could add $20,000 to $30,000 to teachers' salaries, based on significant improvement in student test scores and other yet-to-be-spec-

Metro to Hire Consultant for Escalator Woes

Washington

An outside expert will be brought in to assess chronic troubles with Metro escalators and elevators. The consultant will be in the city this week and is expected to spend several weeks on the assessment.

Metro spokesman Steven Taubenkibel says the consultant will look into problems at the Woodley Park, Bethesda, Dupont Circle and Foggy Bottom stations.

The reliability of Metro's escalators has fallen from 93.7 percent in 2007 to 90.5 percent last year. (AP)

D.C. Will Vote On Electing Top Legal Officer

Washington

District voters will decide whether the city's top legal officer should be elected instead of appointed.

The D.C. Council approved emergency legislation Tuesday that permits the vote. It would be the first citywide referendum since 2002.

Currently, the mayor appoints the attorney general, who the council chooses. Council members deny their decision is aimed at current Attorney General Peter Nickles, who is seen as close to Mayor Adrian Fenty. (AP)

The Battle Over Drones

A U.N. report critical of the covert program isn't likely to change U.S. tactics

Washington

The U.S. government's covert program using unmanned drones to strike at terrorists inside Pakistan is not likely to stop or change, despite new criticism from a U.N. human rights expert.

U.S. officials insist the CIA program has been an effective tool to take out insurgents along the Afghanistan-Pakistan border, particularly those hidden beyond the reach of the military. The stepped-up use of drones over the past year has shown no signs of slowing down and was credited earlier this week with the killing inside Pakistan of al-Qaeda's third in command.

The Obama administration does not acknowledge the secret program, but one senior U.S. official defended its use Wednesday, saying a careful and rigorous targeting process is used to avoid civilian casualties. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the program is classified.

The program, which officials say has killed hundreds of insurgents in dozens of strikes over the past year, has been condemned by critics who say it may constitute illegal assassinations and violate international law. They argue that intelligence officers conducting the strikes could be at risk of prosecution for murder in foreign countries.

In a 29-page report released Thursday, Philip Alston, the independent U.N. investigator on extrajudicial killings, called on countries to lay out rules and safeguards for carrying out the strikes, publish figures on civilian casualties and prove they have attempted to capture or incapacitate suspects without killing them.

"Unlike a state's armed forces, its intelligence agents do not gen-

Highly Valued Targets

Stepped-up drone airstrikes during the Obama administration have led to the death or capture of some of the world's most notorious figures.

MUSTAFA ABU AL-YAZID

(MAY 31, 2010) Al-Yazid, al-Qaeda's No. 3 leader, was killed in Pakistan's tribal belt. He was a founding member of al-Qaeda and a key conduit to Osama bin Laden.

HUSSEIN AL YEMENI

(MARCH 8, 2010) A top al-Qaeda trainer was killed with a drone attack in Pakistan. He helped carry out the suicide bombing on a CIA base in southern Afghanistan on Dec. 30, 2009, that killed seven CIA personnel.

MULLAH ABDUL GHANI BARADAR

(FEB. 2010) The second in command of Afghanistan's Taliban was captured in a joint U.S.-Pakistan operation in Karachi, Pakistan. Baradar oversaw Taliban operations in western and southern Afghanistan.

BAITULLAH MEHSUD

(AUG. 5, 2009) The leader of Tehrik-i-Taliban in Pakistan was killed in a drone assault in South Waziristan, Pakistan. He was blamed as the mastermind of the 2007 assassination of former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto, but he denied involvement.

The number of drone attacks in Pakistan since Obama took office in January 2009, compared with 44 during President George W. Bush's second term, according to figures compiled by the New America Foundation, a Washington, D.C.-based a nonprofit, nonpartisan public policy institute that focuses on next-generation challenges to the United States.

erally operate within a framework which places appropriate emphasis upon ensuring compliance with international humanitarian law, rendering violations more likely and causing a higher risk of prosecution both for war crimes and for violations of the laws of the state in which any killing occurs," wrote Alston, a New York University professor.

The report to the U.N. Human Rights Council puts unwanted scrutiny on the intelligence operations of the United States, Israel and Russia, who, Alston says, are all credibly reported to have used drones to kill alleged terrorists and insurgents. He said the drone strikes by intelligence agencies launched in Afghanistan, Pakistan and elsewhere are particularly fraught because of the secrecy surrounding them.

Administration officials have pointed to a carefully worded speech in March by State Department legal adviser Harold Koh, who said that "U.S. targeting practices, including lethal operations conducted with the use of unmanned aerial vehicles, comply with all applicable law, including the laws of war." The Obama administration, he said, is committed to following the law in its operations against terrorists. FRANK JORDANS AND LOLITA C. BALDOR (AP)

New Chapter in Storied Rivalry

Lakers, Celtics focus on recent history as the NBA finals begin

Pro Basketball

Phil Jackson knows the story by heart, even if his players seem interested only in the last two chapters. Their coach is steeped in the history of pro basketball's most compelling rivalry, familiar with every twist in the Boston Celtics' half-century of championship clashes with the Los Angeles Lakers. The NBA's most decorated franchises have battled through heartbreaks, high stakes and neck aches while forging a true pro sports rivalry, that rarest of commodities in the age of free agency.

Jackson doesn't mind that almost everybody playing in the franchises' 12th NBA finals meeting, starting Thursday night at Staples Center, doesn't have much of a grasp on the history sewn into the uniforms they wear. So what if Ron Artest claims total ignorance of the Lakers' past, while Kobe Bryant says he couldn't care less who Los Angeles played? So what if the deep-seated hatred between the franchises' fans doesn't seem to be truly savored by nearly anybody except Lakers coach Phil Jackson lost two years ago in his first finals against the Celtics.

Paul Pierce, the Los Angeles native turned Celtics star? When asked why the kids these days just don't get it, Jackson smirks and nimbly sidesteps the trap set for grumpy old men and history buffs. "That rivalry is renewed ... it seems like every 20 years, and now here it is," Jackson said. "This is our second time going back at them. It's one that I think piques the interest of the fans of basketball." The clubs are meeting in the finals for the second time in three seasons, and the winner will walk away with the franchises' 33rd combined title. That's more than half the titles in NBA history. Yet this 21st-century confluence of Boston's Big Three era and Bryant's career zenith still hasn't reached the frequency and ferocity of the rivalry's early years. They met seven times in 11 seasons from 1959 to 1969 — and the Celtics won every time. Bryant professes not to care about the rivalry, even when a victory might fulfill Jerry West's prediction that Kobe will go down as the greatest player to wear the Lakers' uniform. Other Lakers aren't excited about playing the Boston franchise so much as they're thrilled for a chance at revenge on these particular Celtics. Leave it to Pau Gasol to find common ground between the importance of this franchise's history and the immediacy of winning one last playoff series in an eight-month grind of a modern season. "The history just makes it a little more exciting than it already is," Gasol said. "It's a matchup that a lot of people want to see."

The History

The Celtics-Lakers rivalry is a storied one dominated by Boston, which is 9-2 in NBA finals against Los Angeles entering this year's matchup.

'59: Celtics in 4
Bill Russell and Bob Cousy swept in a new era of dominance with Boston's first of eight-straight titles.

'62: Celtics in 7
Elgin Baylor's 61 points in Game 5 went for naught after Russell's 30-point, 40-rebound effort in Game 7.

'63: Celtics in 6
Bob Cousy left Boston in style, dribbling out the waning seconds in his last game with the Celtics.

'65: Celtics in 5
Boston's 129-96 victory closed out a series in which only one game was decided by fewer than 13 points.

'66: Celtics in 7
After assuming the title of player-coach, Russell called his own number with his 32 points and 25 rebounds during a 95-93 win in Game 7.

'68: Celtics in 6
John Havlicek's 31 points and Russell's game-saving block were the difference in yet another Celtics championship.

'69: Celtics in 7
Don Nelson's lucky shot preserved a win after a Jerry West jumper cut the lead to one.

'84: Celtics in 7
Bird vs. Magic finally reached the NBA finals, but it was Kevin McHale's clothesline of Kurt Rambis in Game 4 that most people remember.

'85: Lakers in 6
Kareem Abdul-Jabar's 29 points in Game 6 ended Boston's 25-year dominance over the Lakers.

'87: Lakers in 6
Magic Johnson's skyhook over three defenders will live on forever in NBA history.

'08: Celtics in 6
A 39-point rout in Game 6 underscored how dominant Kevin Garnett, Ray Allen, Paul Pierce and the Celtics were in winning their first title since 1986.

Key Position Matchups

1 CENTER: The Lakers sorely missed Andrew Bynum two years ago in the finals, when he was sidelined with a knee injury. He's back now but still has knee problems. Boston's Kendrick Perkins is an excellent defender
Edge: Even

2 SHOOTING GUARD: Kobe Bryant comes off a magnificent series against Phoenix in the western finals, averaging 33.7 points, 7.2 rebounds and 8.3 assists. Ray Allen scored 24 points in Boston's regular-season victory over Los Angeles but was limited to seven in its loss. Edge: Lakers

3 POINT GUARD: Rajon Rondo has been one of the best players in this postseason, but he's taken a lot of bumps along the way. Fisher still can be counted on to hit a big shot somewhere along the way, as he did in Game 4 of last year's finals. Edge: Celtics

4 FORWARDS: Kevin Garnett had the better of Pau Gasol two years ago, but Gasol is much tougher now and is having a terrific postseason. Meanwhile, all of Ron Artest's antics will be forgiven if he can do what L.A. couldn't do two years ago: defend Paul Pierce. Pierce's offensive game is back on track after sacrificed scoring to guard LeBron James. Edge: Celtics

Woods Won't Hire New Coach

Golf

Tiger Woods has no plans to hire another swing coach as he moves into a critical part of the season with two majors on courses where he has won by lopsided margins.

Woods and Hank Haney split up the day after The Players Championship, from which Woods withdrew with a sore neck. He will rely on video to make sure his swing is in the right place.

Woods says his neck is better as he tries to defend his title at the Memorial. The U.S. Open at Pebble Beach is two weeks away. (AP)

Orioles' Losses Are Nats' Gains

Baltimore's misery makes the choice of who to cheer for easy

Commentary

For Washington baseball fans who still cling to some of the affection they had for the Baltimore Orioles during the 33 years when D.C. had no team, it's getting really tough to hang onto faded memories. That past can retain its value. But the current O's, baseball's worst team, are evaporating from our future. That's especially true as the Washington Nationals prepare to take center stage in the baseball world next week.

Since the Nats came to town, they've wrestled with the O's for undecided voters, especially in wealthy suburbs in Maryland between the two ballparks. This season has finally done the trick.

By the All-Star break, the Nats may be the only logical summer choice for those without masoch-istic tendencies.

Ian Desmond takes out Corey Patterson when the Nats hosted the O's last month.

istic tendencies.

For the Nats to match their nadir last season at 26-66, they would have to lose their next 39 games. That's hard to believe. But for the O's to get to 26-66 this year, all they have to do is keep playing exactly as they are. That's even harder to fathom.

And next week, when the Nats presumably draft heralded 17-year-old Bryce Harper on Monday, then unveil Stephen Strasburg on Tuesday, we'll probably see another crucial pivot point in allegiances.

For many, this state of affairs evokes no ambivalence. The pure Nats fan is glad to laugh — at the Birds or anybody else who has been snickering. The O's? They're just the team whose owner fought so long to keep baseball out of D.C. No forgetting, no forgiving.

Perhaps the most empathetic voice regarding the O's is, ironically, Nats President Stan Kasten. He sees similarities between their miseries this year and his own team's suffering last season, when he thought he had an improved team and then watched it fall apart.

"We don't pay attention to the breakdown of fans in the [rich Maryland] counties between the cities," Kasten said. "The demographics of the region say the big dog in the market will be the Nats. But, separately, both towns are big enough to thrive."

"Right now, the Orioles are hurting. But, big picture, they're in really good shape. They're on track. Nothing's derailed that. By this time next year, both teams will have the most important thing you can have: good young starting rotations."

A third of a century is a huge portion of a baseball lifetime to pack in boxes and place in the attic. But, like many Washington fans, I've experienced that process over the past six seasons. I'm still glad to have easy access to both leagues. But it's not the same. In Washington, it's the Nats' time. Alone. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

BRIBERY

One of the Cavaliers' most famous fans is hoping the way to LeBron James' heart is through his stomach. Cleveland native Michael Symon, one of the Food Network's Iron Chefs, has offered to go to James' house once a month and cook a meal for the MVP's family and friends if he re-signs as a free agent with the Cavaliers. Symon posted a letter to James on Symon's Facebook page. James can become a free agent later this summer. (AP)

No. 1 seed comes up one point short in loss at French Open

Tennis

Serena Williams is usually the one who saves match points, not wastes them. Who seizes control of an exchange, not cedes it. Who turns up her game at Grand Slam time.

Except at the French Open, the lone major tournament she's won only once and where she's now gone seven years without even reaching the semifinals.

The No. 1-ranked Williams dropped 17-consecutive points during one stretch, climbed all the way back to within a point of victory, then faded late and lost to No. 7 Samantha Stosur of Australia 6-2, 6-7 (2), 8-6 on Wednesday in the Roland Garros quarterfinals. "Had I played better for two minutes, maybe the result could have been different. But it didn't work out," said Williams, who missed a forehand by an inch or so when she held a match point at 5-4 in the final set. "Just wasn't playing well today. Last year, I choked. I guess it's a redundant story with me."

In keeping with the run of surprises at this wide-open French Open, No. 22 Jurgen Melzer of Austria came back to beat No. 3 Novak Djokovic 3-6, 2-6, 6-2, 7-6 (3), 6-4 in the last men's quarterfinal. His reward: a semifinal Friday against four-time champion Rafael Nadal, who eliminated No. 19 Nicolas Almagro 7-6 (2), 7-6 (3), 6-4. (AP)

If you visited a penis clinic in Toronto or saw a live-action production of "Sailor Moon," you may have run into Samantha Bee. More likely, you've seen her on "The Daily Show," where she has satirized politics with a gleeful, scathing wit since 2003. After taking a break to raise her two children (with "Daily Show" correspondent Jason Jones), Bee has written a memoir, "I Know I Am, but What Are You?" which is getting, uh, buzz for her hilarious account of her bizarre childhood.

What made you decide to write about your family in this book?

Even after all these years, I'm still constantly seeking their approval. I thought they might like to see themselves in book form.

What did you do to refresh your memory?

I called home frequently to see if we remembered things the same way, which we usually didn't, since parents and their children never do. Then I ignored what my parents said and wrote the book anyway.

Were there any memoirs that you took as inspiration? Or any that you wanted to avoid?

I don't know that the story of my life up to now is really worthy of the "memoir" designation. Let's hold off on that one until I single-handedly unify North and South Korea (fingers crossed!).

AUTHOR, 'I KNOW I AM, BUT WHAT ARE YOU?'

How does it feel to have some of this information about yourself out in the world?

Oh, no; why? Should I be scared? Do you know something that I don't? Do I seem ... different to you somehow?

Did writing this book change the way you engage with your children?

I'm very careful now to avoid situations that might inspire them to write a humorous story about me later in life.

Who will play you in the movie adaptation?

Misery Breeds ... and Breeds

'Sycamore Trees' follows the struggle of a flawed family

Stage

In the beginning, Ricky Ian Gordon's musical "Sycamore Trees" seems like a typical dysfunctional family tale, all squabbling siblings and put-out parents.

But by the end of the story, which spans nearly 60 years, one sibling's declaration — "It is STRESSFUL being in this family!" — seems like an understatement.

The production, directed by Tina Landau and part two of Signature

Theatre's "American Musical Voices Project," teams with Broadway stars, led by Marc Kudisch, who portrays the family's patriarch, Sydney.

The family begins when the boorish but charming Sydney meets, courts, impregnates and marries Edie (Diane Sutherland). He is shipped off to World War II while Edie is pregnant with Myrna (Jessica Molaskey), and when he returns, he can't speak of his experiences and struggles with fatherhood.

This is a problem, because Sydney and Edie churn out three more children: Theresa (Judy Kuhn), Ginnie (Farah Alvin) and Andrew (Tony Yazbeck). The family eventually moves from its cramped Bronx apartment to a house on Long Island, but Sydney's simmering resentments and mercurial nature drive his children away.

Their various traumas are communicated through Gordon's songs, at which the tremendously talented and professional cast excels. In particular, the second act's "Father's Song" and "Self-Help" resonate; the former explores Sydney's disappointment in himself for failing his children; the latter cleverly tweaks our obsession with navel-gazing. ERIN TROMPETER

CAROL ROSEGG

Thurgood Marshall rose from being the grandson of a slave to being the first African-American on the Supreme Court. Laurence Fishburne portrays him in "Thurgood."

So when the man sat down to tell you a story, he wasn't just telling you a story. He was going to take you on a journey, and it was going to somehow relate to everybody's humanity and illustrate for you how we're all human beings and we all deserve to be treated with respect."

All that awe might make an audience nervous. How are we going to get anything like a human portrayal of this guy if he's wrapped in a hermetically sealed vitrine of respect that elevates him to the status of an untouchable hero? The answer, according to Fishburne: jokes. "He had an incredible sense of humor," the actor says.

"He was really very funny. The story goes that when Justice Marshall was working in the Supreme Court as a justice, the first half-hour of the day was spent with him regaling his staff with stories and making them laugh so that they could get on with the business of the law with a light spirit. Which I imagine is kind of important if you're working with the law because it can be some heavy stuff to deal with."

Solicitor General Elena Kagan's confirmation hearings for the open seat on the U.S. Supreme Court begin on June 28. Anyone who needs a refresher on the demeanor and accomplishments of a truly great justice — one for whom Kagan was a clerk — can see a credible simulation at the Kennedy Center through June 20.

Doing Marshall Justice

Laurence Fishburne brings respect to his portrayal of a great jurist in 'Thurgood'

Stage

The reverence with which people in this town intone "Justice Marshall" is rivaled only by the seriousness that accompanies an invocation of "Dr. King." Barack Obama is the honorific-less cool kid on the playground. We don't even say Gandhi's first name or Hillary's last. But Thurgood Marshall, the man who argued Brown v. Board of Education, the first African-American justice on the U.S. Supreme Court, gets respect.

Respect is paramount for Laurence Fishburne, 48, who is currently playing Marshall in "Thurgood," a one-man show at the Kennedy Center's Eisenhower Theater. George Stevens Jr.'s 90-minute play follows the jurist almost throughout his entire life: With help from makeup magicians, Fishburne ages from 16 to 85 through the course of one evening.

"What's really great about the show is he's making a case for his life," says Fishburne, whose bass voice makes him sound mellower than he really is.

"He starts out saying, 'Let me tell you the story of my life,' and in so doing, he gives you this great history of our country from 1890 right up to 1990, which is around the time that he passed away."

"Thurgood," directed by Leonard Foglia, tells the story of Marshall's life from adolescence through senescence, via flashbacks, while the justice is lecturing law students at Howard University. So perhaps it makes sense that after a run on Broadway, the play would make its way to Washington.

"The Supreme Court's here, Justice Marshall worked here — both as a lawyer and as a justice — there's the Howard factor, there's the African-American community, there's Baltimore ... which is where he's from, and all points south of here where he did all this amazing work as a civil rights lawyer," says Fishburne. "It'll be very interesting to see who shows up."

Though he admits to having no knowledge of Marshall's resume beyond the Supreme Court before reading the script of "Thurgood," if there's one thing Fishburne conveys when he talks about the man he's embodying, it's awe. Around every corner is another reason to revere Marshall — from his accomplishments to his intellect to his bravery, presence and humor.

What sticks out most, though, is Fishburne's appreciation for the things that make Marshall a great character as well as a those that made him a great American.

"The great thing about Justice Marshall is he was a terrific storyteller," he says. "He was a raconteur of the highest order.

Persistence Of ‘Memory’

Singer-songwriter Nathaniel Rateliff pushes forward with sounds from the past

Music

By his own admission, Nathaniel Rateliff considers himself a lazy screwup. “I’ve always struggled with feeling like a failure, even if I’m not,” says the Missouri-born, Denver-based singer-songwriter. “Maybe it’s something genetic; I don’t know.”

Ironically, that sense of perpetual shortcoming fuels his success as an artist: His tumultuous and insightful new solo album, “In Memory of Loss,” evokes a sense of being out of step with the world — not just through his stream-of-consciousness lyrics, but through his gritty vocals and bold melodies.

“If someone asked me what a song was about, I wouldn’t know how to explain it,” he says. “There’s more emotion than there is definition. Usually, words and melodies just show up. I’m lazy, and, normally, I won’t write something unless it all just comes out in one big shot. But the more I write, the more I’m trying to develop different ways of doing it, to actually work harder on songs.”

Those efforts are evident on “In Memory of Loss,” which sounds diverse and musically adventurous. Backed by an agile band composed of his Denver peers, Rateliff has absorbed many ideas and styles — the exuberance of Van Morrison, the subdued country flair of Gram Parsons, the peculiar gravity of Smog’s Bill Callahan — into a personal style that is familiar yet distinctive.

That range is perhaps a result of his long tenure in the Denver scene, which is small but thriving. “There’s quite a bit of diversity between genres, but you’re seeing it all at the same clubs,” he says. “I have friends who play metal, and you can see them the same night that you would see a singer-songwriter like me play.”

Touring almost constantly and always honing his craft — he’s already recording his follow-up to “In Memory of Loss” — Rateliff is certainly no slouch, but his demons have inspired some great tunes. STEPHEN M. DEUSNER

A Steady Diet of Everything

U.K.’s Futureheads write post-punk a set of new anthems

Music

“The first time we completely messed it up,” reports Barry Hyde, frontman for U.K.’s the Futureheads, recalling the maiden on-stage run-through of “Jupiter,” the penultimate cut on the group’s newest LP, “The Chaos.” “The intro sounded like cats fighting. We ended up finishing it, though, and the crowd went ballistic.”

Such is the musical contradiction the Sunderland-based quartet explores on “Chaos,” a 12-track tour of harmonically dense post-punk that Hyde characterizes as equal parts “musicality and brutality.”

“I love Queen. An archetypal

“The Chaos” reflects influences from British arena-rock to D.C. hardcore.

British rock band,” gushes Hyde, a helpful reference for the elaborate multi-part vocal harmonies his quartet employs. Minutes later, the singer and guitarist is waxing on D.C. hardcore, name-checking Dischord Records and Fugazi. “We’re influenced more by American punk rock than by British stuff.”

Which isn’t to say the lads can’t write a radio single. Though “The Chaos” sports shape-shifting blisters, the ’Heads have equally adept ears for crafting sing-along melodies. “Heartbeat Song” reins in the band’s penchant for compound time signatures and climaxes in an anthemic chorus.

“The Futureheads are ecstatic to be coming to America,” Hyde exclaims. Promising all who catch them on this North American jaunt a memorable evening, the frontman lays it all out:

“We’re a band of contradictions,” he notes. “We’ll be playing really fast, intricate music. We are serious about what we’re doing, but we also want to have a good time. For us, the harder a song is to play, the more fun it is.” GREG BURGETT

NEW MATH: Painter W.C. Richardson explores geometry in “Off the Grid,” a group show at G Fine Art on view through June 26. His works start out structured, but as they unfold, the math that drives them becomes “impure,” as the artist says.

Roughing It With Precision

The National is as elegant as ever, but add rawness on the new CD 'High Violet'

Music

Much has been made of the National's meticulous, perfectionist nature in recording its fifth LP, "High Violet." Eighty takes of "Lemonworld"; songs that would go untouched for weeks; singer Matt Berninger's spending one month writing a single line. Yet in execution, the record is easily the Brooklyn band's loosest.

"A lot of the bands that we all like, whether it be Pixies or Pavement," guitarist Bryce Dessner said, "these bands have a looser feeling about some of their music where they kind of capture these moments that are maybe mistakes, or moments that are more tossed off, but it gives this quality of looseness that we had kind of evaded until now, and I think having our own studio, we were able to do a lot more experimentation and then keep that on record."

The National brought its trademark perfectionism to the recording of "High Violet," but the result is surprisingly loose.

No song is rawer than album opener "Terrible Love" — a droning, subtle slow burn that stems from one of Dessner's and twin brother Aaron's original demos.

"For us, it was really important to open this record with something that was, like, 'Hey, this is different,'" he said. "We're not going to open with the same kind of manicured elegance people are used to. I think a lot of people have really come around to loving it — I mean, that song is my favorite song on the record. To some people, there's an abrasiveness to that sound, which is surprising, especially for National fans. Maybe it's a new sound they're digesting."

After mounds of pre-release hype, "High Violet" has already found the quickest success of any National record, debuting at No. 3 on the Billboard charts and receiving widespread critical acclaim.

"Having our own studio, we were able to do a lot more experimentation and then keep that on record."

— BYRCE DESSNER, GUITARIST WITH THE NATIONAL

"Having the outside world be interested [pre-release] was a kind of luxury: People were buying tickets to concerts before they'd even heard the record; people were willing to write about and write about the process before it was even finished; and that was the first time it's ever happened," he said. "In a way, it's taken us long enough to get to that point that we're pretty humble and sober about what that means. Right now is our moment, but those moments don't ever last."

Bottles and Pans and Clap Your Hands

Junglepunk princess Ebony Bones defies easy categorization

Music

Forget about the Wild Things — the rumpus begins with Ebony Bones. Since coming on the scene in 2007, the London-born digi-glam, junglepunk chanteuse has been rousing fans' spirits with anarchic glee. What became her sound started with the single "We Know All About U," recorded in her apartment using bottles and pans.

"It all starts from that spark of inspiration, I guess, which can come from anything, really," she says.

"Being really excited, being really bored, watching dumb politicians, which we're never short of in the U.K. I think people are generally quite scared to step out of the circumference of what they've been expected to be in life, and by nature choose to stereotype and pigeonhole others, particularly when it comes to music. When an ethnic artist isn't a wailing diva, singing generic pop R&B, pigeonholes and lazy generalizations are again made. But culture clash is nothing new. It's what made artists like the Clash and Prince so magical."

Bones (née Ebony Thomas) has yet to debut an album in the U.S., but she has a vibrant cult following, thanks to the Information Age.

"The Internet still plays a powerful role. I just returned from performing a sold-out show in Beijing and Shanghai for the World Expo, where, despite Internet censorship with no access to YouTube, Twitter or Facebook, they do now, surprisingly, have MySpace.

"It serves as their only platform to discovering new and exciting music the world round. So despite difficulties the industry may face, music still and will always have the power to galvanize." CHRISTOPHER ROY CORREA

Violence, Madness and Beauty

Akira Kurosawa's 1985 masterpiece 'Ran' is restored to all its brutal glory

Film

It's difficult to imagine a grander spectacle than "Ran."

Akira Kurosawa's cinematic reinterpretation of "King Lear" places the royal tragedy in 16th-century Japan, amid profound civil strife. Legendary actor Tatsuya Nakadai plays the aging Lord Hidetora Ichimonji, who foolishly divides his kingdom between the two sons who flatter him and banishes the one who speaks truthfully.

The unspeakable violence that follows is at once both disturbing and gorgeous. Like Lear, Ichimonji loses both his kingdom and his mind. The increasingly bewildered terror on Nakadai's face as the downfall deepens is impossible to forget.

"Ran" put a feudal Japanese twist on Shakespeare's story of honor and regret.

Clocking in at just over 160 minutes, the film certainly requires a degree of patience from its audience, but a work so large thrives on the big screen: The oceans of blood are redder, and Nakadai's ancient face is paler. Kurosawa's experience as a painter is not lost on his films; in fact, he spent years storyboarding the entire film with watercolors prior to filming.

This clearly comes into play when he frames massive, sweeping shots around solitary figures to underscore the epic scale of the tragedy. Pulling from the same experience, the exquisitely contrived sets and costumes illuminate even the film's quietest moments with an intense array of color, and the appropriately jarring camera work during the battle scenes adds to the chaos without distracting. In light of the outstanding production quality, it's no surprise that upon its initial 1985 release, "Ran" was the most expensive film in Japan's history.

After winning countless awards and critical accolades, the film has only continued to grow in stature over the past 25 years. It's fitting, then, that the recently restored print of "Ran" be properly presented in theaters for its anniversary. Film lovers simply owe it to themselves to spend a few hours reveling in Kurosawa's masterful cinematography.

indies & arties

The documentary "Jacques Romain" tells the story of the Haitian novelist.

Caribbean Dreams

The 2010 D.C. Caribbean Filmfest spans the weekend at AFI Silver. The three days are chock-full of diverse, enlightening fare, from a biopic about the life of great Cuban bandleader Benny More to an exploration of the rise of Jamaican reggae as a cultural and musical rebellion, to a coming-of-age story set in the days of post-"Papa Doc" Duvalier Haiti. The closing-night event, a screening of "Punta Soul," about the Garifuna music movement in Belize, will feature director Nyasha Laing and costs only $5. ▶ AFI Silver, 8633 Colesville Road, Silver Spring; opens Fri., through Sun.; 410-495-6700, afi.com/silver. (Silver Spring)

An Island in Tumult

Hou Hsiao-hsien's "A City of Sadness" is one of the most important cinematic works from Taiwan. Set during the days of the island's occupation by Japan and its secession from China, the 1989 film homes in on the lives of ordinary people whose struggles play out against the background of historic upheaval. "A City of Sadness" comes to the Freer Gallery's Myer Auditorium on Sunday as part of "Two Restored Taiwanese Masterpieces"; next weekend will feature Edward Yang's "A Brighter Summer Day."

▶ Freer Gallery, Jefferson Drive & 12th Street SW; Sun., 2 p.m., free with ticket distributed one hour before screening; 202-633-1000, asia.si.edu. (Smithsonian)

Take 10

THE WASHINGTON POST'S FILM CRITICS TACKLE THIS WEEK'S BOX-OFFICE TOP 10

1 Shrek Forever After: Has "Shrek" still got it? As with the best fairy tales, the ones that bear repeating, the delight is in the telling.

MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN

2 Sex and the City 2: "Sex and the City 2" — an enervated, crass and gruesomely caricatured trip to nowhere — seems conceived primarily to find new and more cynical ways to abuse the loyalty of its audience.

ANN HORNADAY

3 Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time: As in the video game it's based on, each obstacle encountered by the heroes of this action fantasy is progressively more difficult. It's a frenetic yet passive experience. (MO)

4 Iron Man 2: "Iron Man 2" is propelled by stuff getting blown up, strafed, consumed by fireballs and

blasted into oblivion. (AH)

5 Robin Hood: Dark and polemic, this is less about a band of merry men than a country of really angry ones. At times, it feels like a political attack ad paid for by the tea party movement, circa 1199. (MO)

6 Letters to Juliet: If putting pen to paper is as much of a chore as watching Amanda Seyfried's new movie, the stationery industry is doomed. (MO)

7 Just Wright: For a movie that's about pro sports — it's half jock nail-biter and half love story — "Just Wright" telegraphs its every move. The only surprise is the chemistry between stars Queen Latifah and Common. (MO)

8 Date Night: This comedy about a couple of fuddy-duddies who get in trouble in the big city works because stars Steve Carell and Tina Fey have the power to crack the other up. (MO)

9 MacGruber: This "SNL"-derived comedy parodies not only the bad '80s hair and super-suaveness of "MacGyver," but also the absurd machismo and melodrama of action flicks. RUTH MCCANN

10 How to Train Your Dragon: This notably good-humored screen version of Cressida Cowell's children's novel is as traditional as it can get. But it's the "3" that truly puts the "D" in "Dragon." MIKE CLARK

Neighborly Nominees

For D.C. restaurants, the RAMMYs are kind of a big deal. Presented by the Restaurant Association Metropolitan Washington, the RAMMY awards honor the best restaurants, chefs and staffs around. Winners will be named Sunday in 13 categories. One of the most challenging categories to be nominated in is “Best Neighborhood Gathering Place.” That’s because votes — cast online by the public — are based not just on food quality but also on atmosphere, service and community involvement. This year’s nominees:

Kemble Park Tavern

5125 MacArthur Blvd. NW; 202-966-5125.

Palisades nominee Kemble Park Tavern woos neighbors with the promise of relaxation. “It’s like a second home to people who don’t want to go home right away,” says manager Hicham Bennani, who points to cushy chairs and comfort foods, including thick steaks, enormous burgers, and fries, fries, fries. Bennani also talks up Kemble Park’s individualized customer service. Not only do servers and bartenders remember everyone’s “usual,” he says, but they also accommodate special requests. The staff has in the past specially ordered individual bottles of scotch and bourbon for patrons. The restaurant also caters to families, with events such as magician Sundays when kids eat free.

EatBar

2761 Washington Blvd., Arlington; 703-778-9951. (Clarendon)

EatBar’s staff describes the gastropub as a friendly place where everybody knows your name. “I come here to meet friends,” says regular Saadana Sakri, who lives nearby. He praises the food, mentioning that he often orders the baby burger. The baby burger is so popular, says manager Matt Molaski, that it’s the one menu item that has stood the test of four years and three chefs.

Chef Barry Koslow says EatBar has something for everyone. Menu

Bar Pilar

1833 14th St. NW; 202-265-1751. (U Street)

Bar Pilar is one of the most popular neighborhood watering holes. “It was my favorite bar before they gave me the keys,” says manager Said Haddad. He says Pilar is successful because it “stays away from flashy gimmicks and advertising.” That simplicity resonates with customers. “It’s pretty low-key,” says Jeremy Flattau, a Washington native. His friend Elisa Rothenbuhler agrees. “I like the decor. And it’s not too loud, with people yelling everywhere.” Pilar’s menu encourages a communal vibe, focusing on shareable small plates. Popular dishes include tender prawns, succulent pork and rare mushrooms with leeks. “It’s a lot of people’s favorite bar to drink at,” says Haddad. “We never close early. And during the blizzard, we were open every day.”

Cork Wine Bar

1720 14th St. NW; 202-265-2674. (U St.)

On 14th Street, Cork Wine Bar strives for comfort. Owners Diane Gross and Khalid Pitts, who’ve lived in the neighborhood for about 13 years, say Cork is a hang-out for various age groups. While many patrons are young professionals, others have lived in the community for decades. And younger patrons, Gross says, often bring their parents to Cork. “That’s a testament to how comfortable folks feel in our space.” “On any given night,” she adds, “about a third of the restaurant is taken up by regulars.” But it also attracts Washingtonians from other neighborhoods. Gross and her husband say they’re proud to be nominated as neighborhood representatives alongside Bar Pilar. And Pilar’s staff agrees: “We’re friends; we’re family,” says manager Haddad.

Belga Cafe

514 8th St. SE; 202-544-0100. (Eastern Market)

Belga Cafe also opened its doors during “Snowmageddon.” Chef-owner Bart Vandaele, who lives five blocks from Belga, had a hand in making 8th Street SE the hub that it is today. “We were the ground-breakers on this street seven years ago,” he remembers. One regular, Cissy Webb, calls Vandaele “a pioneer in the late stages of local restaurateuring.” Webb, who owns Frame of Mine, joined her neighbors at Belga during the snowstorm this year. “Hill residents are very loyal and supportive of local business,” she explains.

Some dishes incorporate fun twists into Belgian food: One savory waffle dish is stuffed with crabmeat, accompanied by mussels and drizzled with saffron sauce.

“We’re people’s first spot before they head out and their last stop before they head home.”

items range from “one-biters” to entrees to meats/cheeses to eclectic wines. Pub events range from Classic Cartoon Brunch to costume movie nights. Bartender Carleton Jenkins says variety is what keeps people coming back. “We’re people’s first spot before they head out and their last stop before they head home.”

The fried-oyster po'boy and a glass of beer are at home in the casual, welcoming new patio space at Blue Ridge Restaurant.

Beer, Brats and Babies

Underage patrons spotted sipping at NW's Blue Ridge!

Minor Issues

The words "beer garden" and "kids" don't usually go together, but at Blue Ridge Restaurant, there's room time for both.

After revamping the patio space — removing a pond and adding 30 feet — owner Eli Hengst was inspired to take full advantage of the area.

"We figured we have all this space that's so unique in this city in the sense that it's removed from the street," says Hengst, who also owns Sonoma Restaurant & Wine Bar and Mendocino Grille & Wine Bar. "A lot of patio space and café seating in D.C. is on the street or near traffic, and there's a lot of noise. The restaurant is in two rowhouses that have been put together. So this is really like a private backyard. It's a little oasis from the city."

Follow the pointing finger to a tasty garden refuge on Wisconsin Avenue.

The beer garden has a special menu of 75 American beers, many from the mid-Atlantic region, such as Hop Hog IPA, Helles Lager and Sunshine Pils. "You're going to see a lot of heavier orientation toward regional hefeweizens, lighter beers like pilsners, things that are definitely great for the warm weather," Hengst says.

Garden munchies include homemade bratwurst with pickled sweet pepper slaw, fried oyster po'boys and crispy Alabama catfish sandwiches. It's open Wednesdays and Thursdays from 9 to about 12:30 a.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 10 to about 2 a.m.

On Thursdays from 5 to 7 p.m. sippy cups threaten to outnumber beer steins during stroller happy hour. "It's a nice way to get out without having to worry about a baby sitter and have a glass of wine or beer and not worry about bothering other guests," Hengst says.

Specials include $1 Rappahannock River oysters, $3 draft beers and $5 wines. Kids can knock back homemade lemonade accompanied by chicken fingers and grilled cheese sandwiches.

"It's not stuff that came out of the freezer and is presented as kids' menu food. It's our same ingredients; we just make it a little more kid-friendly," Hengst says.

Oh, The Things That You'll Break!

FROM THE MINDS OF CHILDREN: You can't protect the ones you love, especially from themselves. That's the lesson in the romantic comedy-drama "Gruesome Playground Injuries" now playing at Woolly Mammoth Theatre, in which a boy and a girl prone to physical and psychological injury learn the limits of leaning on each other for safety as they grow.

Trouble Behind
Charlie Sheen reaches an agreement in his assault case 31

Broadcast Muse

Yea for Reruns!

Whew, May sweeps were TOO MUCH! I mean, I had to watch TV all the time to make sure I didn't miss any finales.

Now the networks are doing their usual hot weather thing — loads o' reruns till fall.

The networks catch flack for their policy of summer reruns. Critics say: It's as if they don't even care if their audience goes buh-bye. Cable, meanwhile, launches fresh shows even in July. The competition has pressed the networks to roll out a few dog day debuts, but it's hardly their A-game. "Losing It With Jillian Michaels," I'm talking to you.

I used to agree with those who said the networks were foolish to stick mainly to reruns in summer. Now I have changed my mind. After the must-see May of 2010, I'm thrilled for time off from obsessive watching. I'm glad to take a break from "30 Rock" and "Amazing Race." Instead, I can sit on my porch! I can walk the cat (as soon as I buy her a kitty leash, which I now totally have time to do). I can live my life to its fullest, basking in the dank air of a Washington summer — all the while counting the days until "Glee" returns.

Big Man on Campus

MTV's 'The Hard Times of RJ Berger' follows a shockingly well-endowed nerd

Television

From those to whom much is given, much is expected.

That even applies to the seemingly shortchanged 15-year-old RJ Berger (Paul Iacono) who sizes himself up for the audience as "scrawny and weird-looking, awkward and pale."

The hero of new MTV scripted comedy "The Hard Times of RJ Berger" follows in a rich TV tradition of winsome misfit adolescents — kids with creativity and spunk lurking just beneath the surface of their systematic victimhood.

But RJ comes with a bonus tucked away in his boxer shorts: He's extremely well-endowed.

Thus does "Hard Times" raise issues that consume males from their early adolescence onward: How much is big enough? Why don't I have more? Why is life so unfair? A show aimed at teen and 20-something guys (plus girls with their own interest in the subject), "Hard Times" portrays the ultimate wish fulfillment of its primary audience, while reminding the viewer that no blessing comes without a cost.

Here is a young man whose gift (never witnessed by viewers, of course, and thus enhanced even more in the mind's eye) is plenty big enough, and then some.

And yet, doggonit, RJ's life

isn't perfect. For RJ, a large penis is as much a curse as a blessing, as much a burden as an object of pride.

As what could be described as "The Wonder Years" meets "Boogie Nights," the 12-episode series premieres Sunday at 11 p.m. after "The MTV Movie Awards." It focuses on RJ's relatable misadventures in high school, and his relatable ambivalence about his manhood, however

Parallels

Two of a Kind

"Hard Times" bears a resemblance to HBO's "Hung." In that drama series, which returns for its second season June 27, a financially struggling family man becomes a male prostitute. But RJ isn't nearly so desperate — his struggles are more those of self-acceptance and gaining acceptance. F.M.

much the physical evidence might scream, "Case closed!"

RJ is free to stew over such dilemmas in private until, in the premiere, the cat (so to speak) is out of the bag. In a wardrobe malfunction during a basketball game, his secret is exposed to the whole student body.

RJ's nerdy, marginal presence is instantly revised among all who behold him. From now on, it seems, he will be identified on campus with a blend of envy, jeering and a bit of the yuck factor. What might very well serve as an advantage is also likely to further stigmatize him.

The long and the short of it: What is expected of RJ is how to deal with his package deal.

But "Hard Times" isn't totally fixated on RJ's phallus. For example, his condition is barely mentioned in the second episode.

At heart, "Hard Times" tells the familiar story of a little guy against the world. The message, delivered in provocative style: Size is what you make of it. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

Natural-Born Storyteller

Christine Lavin is great on paper in her new memoir

Book Review

Folk singers are generally good storytellers, and Christine Lavin is no exception: in her three-decade career, she's released more than 20 albums (solo and with the Four Bitchin' Babes, which she founded), all of which feature her conversational style, both in her lyrics and, sometimes, in spoken-word narrations.

Luckily, that yarn-spinning knack also carries over to her new memoir, "Cold Pizza for Breakfast: a Mem-wha??," which is a compilation of dozens of charming stories about her life on the road, in the studio and at home.

The great thing about "Cold Pizza" is that it's both linear and not: The chapters are arranged mostly chronologically, but Lavin also groups stories by common themes (a chapter on difficult record label situations, for example), characters and locations. Those groupings give her stories a stream-of-consciousness feel that further reinforces Lavin's conversational style; a reader will genuinely feel like one story sparks another, rather than being a side-track or tangent.

Christine Lavin is a folksinger by trade, but her turn as an author is none too shabby.

Lavin also doesn't sugarcoat her past. She's as likely to talk about her failures as her triumphs, and sometimes those disappointments — tales of feisty audiences, or getting booed, or boy troubles, or having her electricity shut off — are the most charming of all. Not that Lavin ever seems unreachable, but those stories make her seem even more human.

A few years ago, I wrote a review of Lavin's album "folkZinger" for

The Washington Post. The album didn't come with a lyric sheet, but Lavin enunciates well, so I had no difficulties transcribing a few of the lines from her political song "The Peter Principle at Work" — or so I thought. I received a letter in the mail from Lavin, commenting that I had transcribed her lyrics incorrectly (whoops!) but that she liked my version better, so she'd be singing my words in concert from then on.

While I haven't been to a Lavin concert since my review to know whether she truly changed the lyrics to match the ones I wrote, I do know this: If there were ever a doubt that all the many quirky, random encounters in "Cold Pizza" could happen to one person, Lavin's letter to me pretty much verifies it.

Digital Immortality

With a hit Broadway show and now its own edition of the "Rock Band" franchise, Green Day is establishing itself as a punk rock brand. "I just like being diverse and trying new things as far as Green Day is concerned," says front man Billie Joe Armstrong. The Grammy-winning, multiplatinum trio join the Beatles as the only other act immortalized in "Rock Band"; the video game is being released next Tuesday. "It's like a glorified karaoke machine," Armstrong said. Regarding the band's computer-generated likeness, the consensus was positive. "Oh, man, we're hot on computers," said Tre Cool, while Mike Dirnt joked: "I don't know if they got enough pimples on me." (AP)

Bentley's Got the Bluegrass

The country singer unplugs for his upcoming release

Music

Some might consider Dierks Bentley's June 8 release, "Up on the Ridge," a departure from his usual style. But the acoustic, bluegrass-flavored venture is actually a return to the country star's roots. While he was struggling to get in the business, the then-19-year-old used a fake ID to get into Nashville's Station Inn listening room. There, he fell in love with the music.

"I love bluegrass. I love acoustic music, so I've always wanted to make a record like this," the Phoenix native says. "Last year, I needed to slow the wheels down a little bit, take some time off to make this kind of record. The original thought was I'd make a bluegrass record and a country record. And once I started working on the bluegrass record, I quickly became aware that this was the only record I'd be making, because we started breaking down the barriers between genres." "We are launching this in both traditional and nontraditional ways," Capitol Records Nashville president/CEO Mike Dungan says.

"This is not your father's bluegrass record. This is definitely new ground." — DIERKS BENTLEY

"Dierks is actually touring in front of this record. We're doing it a little backward here, but so far, it looks really good." Bentley is doing 24 concerts in 30 days, backed by his usual drummer and steel guitar player in addition to acclaimed bluegrass musicians Rob and Ronnie McCoury, and Jason Carter. The title track is one of five new songs Bentley co-wrote in the 12-song collection, which was recorded in Nashville and Brooklyn, where he teamed with the Punch Brothers. "This is not your father's bluegrass record," Bentley says. "This is definitely new ground." DEBORAH EVANS PRICE (BILLBOARD)

Lighthearted Drama

USA capitalizes on its knack for fun but engaging series

Premieres

USA 9:00 Detective work of a very different fashion unfolds on "Burn Notice" (9 p.m., USA), now entering its fourth season. Michael (Jeffrey Donovan) shares secrets of his spy craft with the audience. But he does so in a glib, throwaway manner, shot through with a MacGyver-like eye for detail and gadgetry.

It hardly hurts that "Burn" features a winning supporting cast, with Gabrielle Anwar as Hank's never-too-distant ex, and Bruce Campbell, playing a bottomed-out military intelligence officer as only the star of "The Evil Dead" trilogy can. And Sharon Gless plays Michael's demanding mother, a character who could give Jack's mom on "30 Rock" (Elaine Stritch) a run for her money.

The USA network has found a sweet spot with fun and involving, but not overly complicated genre dramas like "Burn." Returning for its sophomore year, "Royal Pains" (10 p.m., USA) presents a similarly jocular take on the practice of medicine. Mark Feuerstein stars as Hank Lawson, an outcast Manhattan physician reduced to providing private medical services for spoiled and eccentric socialites in the posh Hamptons beach community. Look for Henry Winkler to join "Pains" this season as Hank's father. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)
